About the Seminar

This is a state-level seminar on women's leadership in the context of world politics. World politics is dominated by men till date, but participation and representation of women in direct politics both at the national and global level is not up to the mark. Such an under-representation of women in politics is caused by a number of obstacles including gender discrimination, poverty, social marginalisation etc. But despite all these socio-political and economic barriers, contemporary history of the world has witnessed a few prominent women figures whose contribution to both the regional and global politics is no less paramount. This seminar will focus on the role and performance of women leaders in international political arena beyond their regional spheres. This seminar will also provide us with a number of valuable perspectives on women leadership and address some crucial issues like the limitations, challenges and barriers of female leaders in their political life. The seminar will throw some light, too, on the dynamics of feminist politics, a politics which has furnished the women leaders throughout the world with an intellectual vigour to confront all-round patriarchal set-up of society. It is ardently hoped that this seminar will add erudite knowledge to the problematics and prospects of women leadership on a global scale and serve as a platform for the future women leaders.
